Glenn-Richardson House
1901 Jerrys Road
Federal Hill vicinity
Private

ca. 1820-1850

The Glenn-Richardson House and outbuildings are a fairly complete mid to late 19th century agricultural complex. The log wing of the main house and the two remaining log outbuildings exemplify the first structures usually erected on a farm. The main section of the house and the later barn and wagon shed are more typical of the last half of the century. Of particular note are the barn's "Palladian" windows, a feature found mainly in the northern and western parts of the County. It is possibly attributable to Pennsylvania barn builders or their influence.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Glenn-Richardson House is a circa 1850 frame house with a log rear wing dating from about 1820. The main section has two stories and a shed porch extending across two elevations. The house and its outbuildings are located on the south side of Jerrys Road about 1/2 mile west of the Fawn Grove Road intersection near Federal Hill, Harford County, Maryland. The main elevation of the house faces south.

The main section has five bays and a center entrance on the south. The entry has a rectangular transom. The windows are 6/6 with louvred shutters. The porch has turned columns and extends across the south and east elevations. Interior end chimneys rise from the slate roof at the east and west gable ends. On the west gable end, a modern garage with an upper level adjoins the main section. The upper level of the garage is the most recent addition to the house.

The log rear wing adjoins the main section at the northeast corner. The wing has 1-1/2 stories with a recent exterior brick chimney at its north end. The half-story has small square windows. The shed porch of the main section continues across the east side of the wing.

The foundation of the house is stone and the roof is slate except in the garage addition where there is a concrete foundation and composition roof. The original exterior weatherboards are now covered with asbestos shingles.

Just northwest of the house is a 1-1/2 story log outbuilding which is probably contemporary with the rear wing of the house. The chinking has been replaced almost entirely in recent years. The upper half story and roof has also been rebuilt. The gable roofed house has a one-room and loft plan with a door in the south elevation and small windows on the east and west elevations. A rebuilt interior chimney is located at the north end. The location and size of the building suggest it may have been originally a summer kitchen or slave quarters. It is now used as a play-house.

About 40 yards further northwest is a log springhouse. A metal roof extends over an open shed on the east side. This building has also been rechinked recently. According to the present owner, a hydraulic ram forced water from the spring house through lead pipes to the barn. There is no evidence that water was piped to the house.

A frame wagon shed dating from the mid to late 19th century is located about 20 yards southeast of the house. This shed has a stone foundation and rough log main structural timbers. The central space is flanked on the east side by a smaller shed extension, possibly used originally for tack. The gable roof is slate and the vertical siding is weathered, but traces of whitewash are visible under the eaves.

Somewhat further south of the house is a frame bank barn with a stone foundation, vertical red-painted siding, and a slate roof. The interior structure is joined by mortise and tenon. The most noticeable feature of the barn, which is also a mid to late 19th century structure, is the use of a "Palladian" window in the gable ends. The central arched window is flanked

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Glenn-Richardson House and outbuildings are a fairly complete mid to late 19th century agricultural complex. The log wing of the main house and the two remaining log outbuildings exemplify the first structures usually erected on a farm. Of particular note are the barn's "Palladian" windows, a feature found mainly in the northern and western parts of the County. It is possibly attributable to Pennsylvania barn builders or their influence.

William Glenn was the owner of the farm in 1860. Ezekiel Richardson purchased the farm in 1876 and it is his name, "Z. (Zeke) Richardson" which appears on the 1878 Martenet Map. The Richardson family retained ownership until 1912.

NOTE: HA-1701 was originally assigned to the Residence/Old Hotel at 5403 Norrisville Rd. This was a duplication and was later cancelled. See HA-1620 for the Old Hotel.
